Phones in Schools

In several districts throughout the state telephones have been placed in rural schools and are proving quite beneficial to teachers, scholars, and parents. In case of sickness of a pupil the telephone comes in very handy to either call a doctor or to notify the child's parents. In bad or stormy weather it again comes in quite handy, giving the parents an opportunity to send word to the teacher that they will come to the school house for the scholar, and in many different ways the telephone in the country school is proving quite a valuable addition. In most places the phones are put in without any expense to the district. A social or some other form of entertainment being held at the schoolhouse and the money is raised in this way.
